We are the progressive bank for the progressive community

Our bank is specifically designed for organizations, companies and individuals who want to make an impact on society. Our customers include thousands of labor unions, non-profits, socially responsible businesses, political organizations and foundations –who are active, involved and committed to making our communities stronger, smarter, fairer, cleaner and safer.

Learn more

417 Political Organizations

We're political animals... banking hundreds of progressive political organizations, campaigns and candidates (417, as of this morning).

Not just because we share visions and values, but because we work campaign hours, not bankers' hours.

So we've arranged wire transfers to media outlets while other banks slept, and opened new lines of credit from an airport at 3am.

To us, that's politics as usual.

Learn more

1000+ Unions

We work side-by-side with over 1000 unions... to get what's best for teachers, steelworkers, firefighters and others keeping us safe, smart and strong.

We manage $40 billion in retirement investments... have Workforce Housing Funds to help vital community workers afford the community...even give strike loans to workers walking picket lines.

And yes, you just might see us out there walking with them.

Learn more

Environmental organizations love our environment

They love the solar panels we're installing on our buildings... and the special lines of credit we'll give homeowners to do the same thing.

They love that we'll only invest their resources... and ours... in tobacco-free funds. And carbon-free funds.

And they love that our commitment to a greener, more sustainable planet is as clear and uncompromising as theirs.

Small but important print
1. APY means Annual Percentage Yield. Rates effective as of January 7, 2017.
2. Your mobile carrier's message and data rates may apply.
3. Fees may apply for non-Amalgamated, non-Allpoint and international ATM transactions.
4. This is a hypothetical calculation based on current rates and annual cumulative interest earned and donations made on a monthly basis

Special Rules for Give-Back Savings Accounts – When you open your Give-Back Savings account, you designate the Participating Organization to which you want the Bank to contribute. In addition to the interest paid to you, the Bank will make a contribution to that Organization following the end of each month. The amount of the contribution will be equal to one-half of the total interest paid to your Give-Back Savings account during that month.

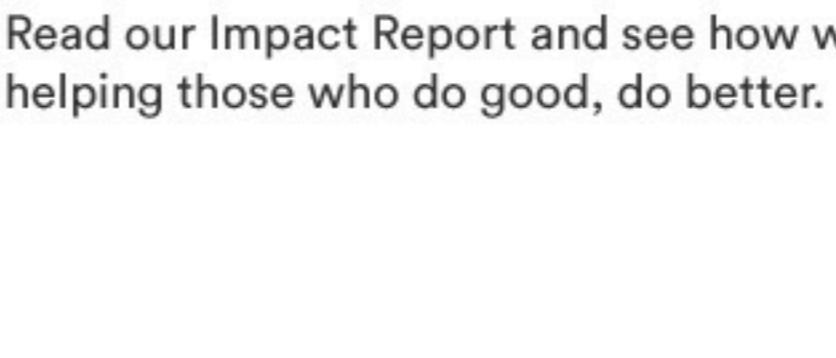

This contribution is paid directly to the Participating Organization by the Bank, at no cost to you, and is not part of the APY for your account. As the Give-Back contribution is made the Bank, there may be no tax implications to you. Consult your tax advisor with any questions. There is no substitute for this contribution, and there may not opt to receive it directly.

If you close your Give-Back Savings account, the Participating Organization will no longer receive a contribution based on your balance. If the Bank has an agreement with the Organization, we will no longer make a contribution to that Organization based on your balance. You may designate a different Participating Organization, nor stop bank contributions to the current Participating Organization, unless you close your Give-Back Savings account and open a new account.

This is a variable rate account. The rates may change after the account is opened. Fees may reduce earnings. Advertised rate and APY are offered at the bank's discretion and may change daily.

Living in the same city where you work fosters a critically important connection to the community and people you serve. Yet for firefighters, police officers, teachers, nurses and millions of other low- and moderate-income workers in urban areas, it can be a herculean challenge to find safe, affordable housing near where they work. Since the housing and economic crash of 2008, cities have failed to keep pace with the demand for housing for low- and moderate-income renters and owners, forcing too many workers to live away from the communities that need them most. In its Housing Finance at a Glance Monthly Chartbook, the Urban Institute reports that, for the majority of the nation's largest metropolitan areas, home sales prices are less affordable in 2016 than they were in 2003.

The private market is doubling down on amenity-rich, city-center housing, which is simply too expensive for all but the highest paid workers to afford. And many municipalities and state governments are taking laudable steps to invest in subsidized housing to serve the homeless or those living in poverty. Unfortunately, low- and moderate-income workers still face a dearth of affordable housing options and continue to be priced out of the cities where they work. Even without any further cuts to federal housing support by the Trump Administration, the Center on Budget and Housing Priorities projects that due to the 2011 Budget Control Act, rental vouchers for 25,000 low income households will lose funding in 2017.

Housing insecurity also means urban centers are losing potential for economic growth. Without middle-income earners living in or near our largest population centers, the economy quickly becomes constrained and sometimes even incapable of growth. These middle-class families are critical drivers of local businesses, spending income on transportation, child-care, and retail goods for their households. They contribute to the region's tax base, helping to fund local schools and public services. Without these members of the labor force living within the cities they serve, the culture and vitality of cities themselves begin to suffer.

As the bank with values, we take our role in addressing the nation's housing shortage seriously.

Amalgamated Bank understands this critical gap in the urban housing market, and has been working to help fix it for more than 80 years. Back in the 1940s, Amalgamated Bank helped fund the first union-supported housing development in the country, housing 700 moderate-income families at first, and eventually growing to house over 1,400 families. In 1957, we offered home loans to the shareholders of the Park Reservoir Housing Cooperative in the Bronx, the state's first affordable development created under the Mitchell-Lama Housing Program.

Our work to create affordable housing options continues to this day. Today, more than half of our commercial real estate loans are made in low- and moderate-income neighborhoods, helping workers afford to keep living in the communities they serve. Amalgamated Bank now has a loan program to fuel construction of up to $100MM in affordable multifamily housing in New York across all five boroughs, Nassau County, and the Hudson Valley. And our work doesn't stop in New York. In 2015, a 25-unit affordable housing development for seniors broke ground in Washington, D.C.

As private housing construction has turned away from affordable and moderate housing over the past several decades, it has created opportunities for Amalgamated and others to use our assets to build a stronger, more accessible economy for all. Recently, we've redoubled our efforts to finance the development of multifamily and mixed use properties located in areas and priced at a level that will allow middle income households to return to the cities where they work. Additionally, through a Responsible Contractor Policy, we will work to ensure that we increase job opportunities for low and moderate income workers.

As the bank with values, we take our role in addressing the nation's housing shortage seriously. Working families are the backbone of our nation's economy and, unless they are given the opportunities they need to succeed, we will continue to watch cities become unaffordable to all but the very affluent. We take pride in our ability to offer financing for affordable housing to help counter this trend. Every member of the workforce should have the opportunity to live in the city in which they work and a chance to feel invested in a neighborhood they've helped to create.
